

ROBBED DYING BANKER.

Charge Made in Court Against a Professional Nurse.

Many Other Thefts Discovered in a Private Hospital.

Louis Ingalls, a professional nurse, forty-four years old, was held in Jefferson Market Court today in $1,500 on a charge of robbery.

Ingalls recently obtained employment in a private hospital kept by Prof. Keese and Dr. Chivest at 108 East Thirty-fourth street.

He presented a recommendation purporting to be signed by Dr. Lyons, of Bloomingdale Asylum, but that has since proved to be a forgery.

Between 2 and 3 o'clock A. M., Sept. 27, Ingalls was in attendance on Francis Quackenbush, a retired banker, who was believed to be dying.

The sick man's wife was also at his bedside. She charged that she saw the nurse take her husband's watch and chain, worth $300, and when she remonstrated with him he threatened her and left the room.

He did not return, and Mrs. Quackenbush awoke the physicians and told them what had occurred.

While it is easily realized that this apparent improvement is temporary only, it served to cheer the President's household for the day at least, and the general air of the mansion was less dispiriting.

MYRA GOODWIN'S SUDDEN CALL.

The Young Soubrette Will Be Buried To-Morrow.

Theatrical people were surprised to-day when they learned of the sudden death of Myra Goodwin, the winsome young soubrette who once starred in "Sis."

She was forced to take to her bed last Thursday, and Dr. Pope, of 126 West Forty-fifth street, attended her.

Myra Goodwin was a sister of George Richards, a comedian well remembered in the "Midnight Bell." "A Rag Baby" and other of his pieces.

She was in her twenty-second year, and was a graceful dancer. Her death was a great loss to her family, and she was believed to be born in that city.

Rescued from Death

All Said She Could Not Live a Month

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Not Alice and Nell—Thanks to Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"I must praise Hood's Sarsaparilla, for it is a wonderful medicine. I suffered from NEURALGIA AND DYSPEPSIA and fainting spells. Sometimes I would be almost stiff with cold perspiration. I spent a great deal of money for medical attendance, but I did not get any benefit until I began to take it. I reached less than 100 lbs., and was a picture of misery."

Every one who saw me thought I could not live another month. But I began to improve at once after beginning with Hood's Sarsaparilla, and have regained my health. I am now perfectly cured. I eat well, sleep well and am in perfect health. I love it all.

EARLY DAYS OF THE BOWERY.

When Burglars Sat Beneath Trees in Front of Their Houses.

And Before Its Name Called Up Scenes of Gayety.

The Bowery!

Nearly every American who hears that word pictures to himself scenes of gayety, of sharp dealing, of debauchery and of dark deeds, running the gamut from sneak-thievery and bunco-steering to murder.

Because of these associations some aesthetic persons have lately started the proposition to rechristen the Bowery and give it a new start in life under an unaltered name.

Those who oppose this proposition contend that there is nothing inherently bad in the name Bowery, and that though the street were given the most genteel appellation the character of its bygone days could not be altered and would continue to be inseparably connected with its name.

The word Bowery—or Bowlerie—is the

THE OLD BOWERY THEATRE.

Dutch for farm, and was bestowed upon the street by the first masters of Manhattan Island on account of the numerous country residences which lined it.

THE OLD BOWERY THEATRE.

When New York was still called New Netherlands and its Dutch governors were contemplating with quiet satisfaction the growth and prosperity which the city enjoyed under their tolerant policy; when Huguenot, Lutheran, Baptist and Quaker; when Dutch, English, Irish, German, Swedish and French worshippers and trafficked harmoniously side by side, while the neighboring colonies were given up to perpetual feud—it was then that the official designation of the street took its name from the Bowery.

It must have been pleasant in those early days when New York numbered 5,000 people, and the streets were filled with the voices of the Dutch, the English, the French, the German, the Irish, the Swedish, the Quaker, the Huguenot, the Lutheran, the Baptist and the Quaker.

The Bowery was a place of great interest and attraction. It was a place where the Dutch, the English, the French, the German, the Irish, the Swedish, the Quaker, the Huguenot, the Lutheran, the Baptist and the Quaker.

THE CHURCH ON BOWERY LANE IN 1810.

There was at one time, a church on the Bowery. This was away back in the time of Peter Stuyvesant, and so does not tend materially to disturb the traditions for which the Bowery has earned its name.

The church was one of three houses which constituted a hamlet on Gov. Stuyvesant's farm. It was a little west of where St. Mark's Church now stands and was presided over alternately by Hermanus Van Hoboken, shoemaker in New Amsterdam, and by Dominie Selyns, and afterwards by Dominie Megapolensis.

By the will of the Governor's widow, who died in 1660, the church building was devised to the Reformed Dutch church with the power to demolish the edifice provided the vault of her husband was preserved.

The other two buildings of this hamlet were the tavern previously spoken of as the meeting place of the Commissioners to discuss the invasion of Canada, and a blacksmith and wheelwright shop.

How the Bowery has since grown is not pertinent to an inquiry into the early history of the street. One interesting fact, however, remains to be told, which is that no in-

Got a Ride, After All.

Two small boys signalled a street car, and when it stopped they noticed that one boy was lame. With much solicitude the other boy helped the cripple aboard the car, and, after telling the conductor to go ahead, returned to the sidewalk, sans exchange.

The lame boy braced himself up in his seat so that he could look out of the car window, and the other passengers observed that the lame boy was lame.

The passengers watched the lame boy running along the sidewalk, straining every muscle to keep up with the car.

The passengers asked the lame boy who the other boy was.

"My brother," was the prompt reply.

"Why doesn't he ride with you in the cart?" was the next question.

"Cause he hasn't any money," answered the lame boy, sorrowfully.

It is needless to say the lame runner was speedily invited into the car, and the arm-chair passenger who noticed him paid his fare, and gave each boy a quarter cent.
